What is a Census?

A census is an official count or survey of the population in a country. The information recorded varies from census to census. In Ireland the census was taken:

- Every 10 years
- Between 1801-1911

What Happened to the Irish Census Records?

- Census years 1801-1891 were mostly destroyed
- Censuses from 1821-1851 are called Fragments and are available on FamilySearch.org and other websites
- The 1901 and 1911 are complete, indexed and imaged
- Census substitutes are a way to fill in the gaps of early census loss.

What is a Census Substitute?

Any list that places a person in a particular location in a specific time period. Some examples are:

- Land and property records
- Militia lists
- Religious censuses
- Tax lists
- Various compiled lists

FamilySearch Research Wiki pages for Census Fragments

- See the FamilySearch Research Wiki page Ireland Census Fragments Available at the Family History Library for a list of all census fragments for the 1821-1851 censuses. They are listed by county and then parish:
https://familysearch.org/wiki/en/Ireland_Census_fragments_available_at_the_Family_History_Library.
- Indexes with digital images are also available in the FamilySearch Historical Records Collection:
https://familysearch.org/search/collection/list/?page=1®ion=UNITED KINGDOM IRELAND&recordType=Census.

The Census of 1821

Government extracts exist for some parishes where all people were recorded. Fragments available at:

- www.FamilySearch.org
- www.findmypast.ie

The Census of 1831

Original census records shows heads of household. Census fragments for many parishes in Londonderry exist:

Church Records

Church records can provide: names, birth dates, baptisms, residences that could be compiled into a census substitute type of record. Access to these records are available on many websites. Transcribed information on www.rootsireland.ie, www.familysearch.org, www.ancestry.co.uk, www.irishgenealogy.ie, and www.findmypast.ie.

The Public Record Office of Northern Ireland has a great collection of Church Records for Belfast and Antrim areas of Ireland and also Presbyterian records www.ancestryireland.ie. These records are available for most places after 1850. The National Library of Ireland released free online access to images of Catholic Church parish records. Indexes to these church records are available from www.rootsireland.ie, www.ancestry.co.uk and www.findmypast.co.uk.

Land and Property Valuation

These records are especially useful from the 1820s onwards. There are gaps, but you can locate families residing on the same property for generations and therefore can trace lines from these valuation type records. They include the following:

- Tithe Applotment
- Griffiths Valuation
- Valuation lists (Revision Books) see Catalog on FamilySearch.org under each County
- After 1858 and later under Land and Property
 - www.familysearch.org
- Landed Estate Court Records, 1850-1885
 - www.findmypast.ie

Old Age Pension Claims

Irish census forms 1841 and 1851. The government used these forms to search the 1841 and 1851 censuses to prove the age of people applying for old age pensions. Birth certificates did not exist as civil registration of birth began in 1864.

The census search forms contain the applicant's name, address, residence in 1851 with county, barony, parish, townland and street originally captured at The National Archives of Ireland and the index was created by www.findmypast.ie also available on FamilySearch.org.

Dog Licence Registers 1866-1914

You can search more than 6 million dog licenses to find the colour, breed and gender of your ancestor's pet. You can also find the name and address of their owner. Available at www.findmypast.ie.

Directories

Irish directories list names, occupations and address. These can be used as a head of household census. Check the FamilySearch Catalog for availability by city and time period. Belfast and Ulster street directories are available at <https://www.nidirect.gov.uk/services/search-street-directories>.

Religious Census of 1766

Taken March and April 1766. This database is an index to fragments of the 1776 Religious Census of Ireland. The index covers over 11,000 heads of households, giving their names, parish and religion. Available at www.ancestry.com.

Irish Flax Growers List, 1796

As part of a government program to encourage linen trade, free spinning wheels or looms were granted to individuals planting at least one rood of flax ($\frac{1}{4}$ acre) on their land. The lists of those entitled to the awards, covering almost 60,000 individuals, were published in 1796, and record only the names of the individuals and the civil parish in which they lived. The majority, were in Ulster, but some names appear from every county except Dublin and Wicklow.

Reproductive Loan Fund Records, 1822-1854

Almost completely survived. After loans ceased in 1848, all records were returned to London and they are available at The National Archives in Kew (Series T/91). Index available at www.findmypast.ie. There are loan ledgers, repayment books and defaulters' books. The minimum information supplied is the name and address, but much additional detail is often given, notes on health, occupation, family circumstances and emigration.
